RULES & REGULATION

Kabaddi Rules: Playing area

- The playing surface measures 13 * 10 meters.
- The playing area is divided into two halves.
- One team occupies each half. ...
- There are two teams which contest a match.
- Every team has a total of seven players and both teams lodge opposite halves of the field.
  - He is a game played between two teams. It is played by the players of the two different teams that are against each other. Each team has 7 players and one team tries to touch the players present on the other side that is the different team players to get Technical points.
  - Meanwhile, the players of the Opposing Team try to prevent the raider from coming back to its own team by opposing the raider. The Raider is supposed to touch as many players as possible in the opposition team in one go. The same number of points goes to the raider team depending on the number of players he has been in contact with.
  - If the opposition team manages to stop the raider then the raider is considered disqualified. The team stopping the raider gets a point in this case. The team gets a point when the raider is prevented from entering their court. In this way, players play against each other.
  - The team with the most points is considered as winners when all the players in a particular team are disqualified whereas the Opposing team is still left with its players. That team is declared victorious according to the points. He consists of 12 players. Out of which seven players are on the court and 5 are kept as reserved. A line is drawn in the middle of the court which divides the two teams into two separate parts.
  - Duration of the game
  - The game is usually played in two Halves of 20:20 Min ( with a five-minute break between halves ). After every 20Min, the team changes its court. For this, both teams get a break of 5 minutes. Each team consists of 5 to 6 catchers and four to five raiders respectively.
  - The coach captain of the International Kabaddi team can take time out in between when the Kabaddi match is played in which he can discuss tactics to play between the players and the captain. This break is about 2 minutes. The match is organized according to the weightage of the players.

- Technical rules:
- According to the Rules of Kabaddi, some decisions are also given. Such as during a knockout semi-final Kabaddi match of kabaddi if the raider challenges the touch, the umpire can change that decision based on its TV response similar to the third umpire strategy in cricket. The maximum time for counseling is 20 seconds. Consultation has to be decided within 20 seconds.
- Bonus Line:
- The bonus line feature is activated inside Kabaddi when 6 players remain inside the court in the rescue team while the raider goes to that team and crosses the bonus line thus again falling into his court after he has touched them all. Here, the raider gets a Technical point.
- Super tackle
- Inside Rules, if three players of the rescue team managed to catch the raider then the raider is considered as out. So, it is called Super Tackle. In this, the team with the current rescue player gets 2 points.
- Kabaddi lobby rules
- When the raider goes to raid and enters the green lobby without touching the player of the opposing team after leaving his breath in this condition then the raider is considered out. The opponents team gets one point for this.
- All Out
- Inside the kabaddi, if the raider comes into the opposition court and dismisses the players. So that team goes all out and the advantage is that the Offensive team gets 2 points more.

Rules and Regulations

Running 100 meter

- Every 100-meter sprinter must begin the race with his feet in the starting blocks. The official race starter will call the sprinters to their blocks and on command the runners will adopt a set position.
- The set position requires the runners to have both feet in the blocks and adopt a position with the body weight on their hands.
- On the starter's gun all runners begin the race.
- The athletes cannot touch the starting line or the other side of the starting side line before the pistol fires.
- A false start is called when the feet of a runner leave the starting blocks before the starter's gun.
- Once the sprinters start to run, they need to make sure that they do not step on the white lines that mark the lanes throughout the race.
- Sprinters should run in their designated lanes and cannot cross the lanes throughout the race.
- Athletes cannot obstruct each other's path or else they will get disqualified.
- Athletes should not leave the track but if they do so they cannot come back on the track. This leads to disqualification.
- The finish is the decisive stage of the race, and is very exciting when sprinters are close to each other in terms of ability. The time of a runner is recorded when the trunk of the body crosses the finish line.

2. There will be team of 2 and 4 player will be playing on a single board.
3. Teams will be decided on the random basis at the spot.

5. For each strike, the player must position the striker within the baseline OR on one of the two circles at either end of the baseline.
6. The striker may not “cut the moon” – be placed partially within the baseline and partially within the circle. In other words, striker should touch the base lines either covering red circle completely or not touching at all.
7. The choice of color of piece will be done by toss.
8. If a player pockets a piece, he/she gets another chance.
9. To cover the Queen, a player should have at least, 1 piece in the pocket.

11. Horizontal strikes are allowed.
12. Judge's decision will be final

Games: Chess

Rules & Regulations:

Setup

Chess is played on a square board divided into eight rows of squares called ranks and eight columns called files, with a dark square in each player's lower left corner.<sup>[13]</sup> There are 64 squares on a chess board. The colors of the squares are laid out in a checker (chequer) pattern with light and dark squares. To make speaking and writing about chess easy, each square has a name. Rank are numbered from 1 to 8, and each file is lettered from a to h. The letter assigned to a file comes before the number.

its ownbel, such as g1 or f5. The pieces are in white and black sets. The players are called White and Black, and at the start of a game each player has 16 pieces. The 16 pieces are one king, one queen, two rooks, two bishops, two knights and eight pawns.<sup>[4]</sup>

Movement

Definitions: vertical lines are files; horizontal lines are ranks; lines at 45° are diagonals. Each piece has its own way of moving around the board. The X marks the squares where the piece can move.

The knight is the only piece that can jump over another piece.

No piece may move to a square occupied by a piece of the same color.

All pieces capture the same way they move, except pawns.

The king (K for short) can move one square in any direction. The king may not move to any square where it is threatened by an opposing piece. However, the king can move to a square that is occupied by an opponent's piece and capture the piece, taking it off the board.

The queen (Q) can move any distance in any direction on the ranks, files and diagonals.

The rooks (R) move any distance on the ranks or files.<sup>[4]</sup>

The bishops (B) move diagonally on the board. Since a bishop can only move diagonally, it will always be on the same color square.<sup>[14]</sup>

The knights (Kt or N) move in an "L" shape. Each move must be either two squares along a rank and one square along a file, or two squares along a file and one square along a rank. It is the only piece that can jump over other pieces. Like the other pieces, it captures an opposing piece by landing on its square.

The pawns can only move up the board. On its first move a pawn may move either one or two squares forward. A pawn captures one square diagonally, not as it moves: see white circles on its diagram. In some situations, pawns can capture opponent's pawns in a special way called en passant, which means in passing in French (see below).<sup>[1]</sup>

Capturing

Most pieces capture as they move. If a piece lands on an opponent's piece, the opposing piece is taken off the board. There are three special cases:

The king cannot be taken (see check and checkmate).

No piece can be taken while castling (see below).

Pawns take one square diagonally.

An example of checkmate

If a move that attacks the opposing king is made, the king is said to be 'in check'. The player whose king is in check must make a move that escapes the check. A player can't move into check. The options when a player is in check are moving the king, capturing the threatening piece, or moving another piece between the threatening piece and the king.<sup>[15][16]</sup>

To win the game one player must checkmate the other player. Checkmate happens when the other player's king is in check and there is no way to get out of check.<sup>[14]</sup> The word checkmate is often shorted to "mate". Most games end with one of the players resigning (giving up) when their position is so bad that defeat seems inevitable.

Special moves

Castling

A chess castling move

Once in every game, each king can make a special move, known as castling. When the king castles, it moves two squares to the left or right. When this happens, the rook is moved to stand on the opposite side of the King.<sup>[17]</sup> Castling is only allowed if all of these rules are kept:<sup>[12]p120</sup>

Neither piece doing the castling may have been moved during the game.

There must be no pieces between the squares the king and the rook.

The king may not be currently in check. The king can't pass through any square attacked by the opponent as well. As with any move, castling is not allowed if it would place the king in check.<sup>[14]</sup>

En passant

En passant ('in passing' in French) is a special capture. It is only available when a pawn moves forward two squares past an opposing pawn on an adjacent file. The opposing pawn must be on the 5th rank from its own side. Then the opponent's pawn can capture the double-mover as if it had only moved one square forward. This option is open on the next move only.<sup>[14]</sup>

For example, if the black pawn has just moved up two squares from g7 to g5, then the white pawn on f5 can take it by en passant on g6. The en passant rule was developed when pawns were allowed to make their double move. The rule made it more difficult for players to avoid pawn exchanges and blockade the position. It kept the game more open.

Promotion

When a pawn moves to its eighth rank, it must be changed for a piece: a queen, rook, bishop, or knight of the same color (player's choice).<sup>[18]</sup> Normally, the pawn is queened, but in some cases another piece is chosen to get an advantage. This is called 'under-promotion'.<sup>[4]</sup>

Ways a game may end

Checkmates are rare in competitive chess. The most common ends are decisions made by one or both players.

Wins

Checkmate. When a king is in check, and cannot get out of it.

Resignation. A player may resign at any time, usually because their position is hopeless. A losing player is able to resign by placing their king on its side on the chessboard.

Out of time. If player's clock time is over (exceeding the time control). Strictly speaking, this is not part of the rules of the game, but part of the rules of tournament and match chess where chess clocks are used.<sup>[4][12]Chapter 8</sup>

Forfeit: A player who cheats, doesn't follow the rules, or doesn't follow the rules of conduct for a tournament can be forfeited. Sometimes, both players are forfeited.<sup>[19]</sup>

Draws

Draw agreed. A game may end in a draw at any time if one player offers a draw and the other accepts.

Insufficient material or dead position . A position where no series of legal moves could lead to a mate (example: K+B vs K). The game is drawn.<sup>[12]p92</sup>

Stalemate. If a player cannot make a move, and the player's king is not in check, this is also a draw. This kind of draw is called a stalemate, and is rare.<sup>[4]</sup>

50-move rule. A game will also end in a draw if no piece is captured and no pawn has moved after fifty moves. This is called the fifty-move rule, and happens late in the game.<sup>[20]</sup>

Threefold repetition. If the exactly same position is repeated three times during a game with the same player to move each time, the player next to move may claim a draw. The game is now drawn. This is called a draw by threefold repetition.<sup>[21]</sup>

Competition rules

The FIDE rules for competitive chess include all the rules above, as well as several others.<sup>[4][12]p92 et seq</sup>

Touch and move law

If a player wishes to adjust a piece on the board, they must first say "J'adoube" (I adjust) or the equivalent. Apart from that, if a piece is touched it must be moved if possible. This is the touch-and-move law.<sup>[9]p425[4]</sup> If no legal move is possible with the touched piece, the player must make a legal move with another piece.<sup>[12]p90 et seq</sup> When a player's hand leaves a piece after moving it then the move is over and may not be changed (if the move was legal).

There are a few famous cases where players appeared to break this rule without being punished. The most famous example was by the then World Champion Garry Kasparov against Judit Polgar in a top-class tournament.<sup>[22][23]</sup>

Chess clocks

Competitive games of chess must be played with special chess clocks which time a player only when it is their turn to move. After moving, the player presses a button on the clock, which stops the player's clock and starts the opponent's clock. Usually the clocks are mechanical, but some are electronic.<sup>[4]Article 6[12]p92 et seq</sup> Electronic clocks can be set to various programs, and they can count moves made.<sup>[12]chapter 8</sup>

otation for recording moves

Algebraic chess notation

Checkmate can be written as # or ++. At the end of the game, 1-0 means "White won", 0-1 means "Black won". The moves of a chess game are written down by using a special chess notation. This is compulsory for any competitive game.<sup>[14]</sup>Article 8 & Appendix E Usually, algebraic chess notation is used.<sup>[24]</sup> In algebraic notation, each square has one name, regardless of whether you are looking from White's side of the board or Black's. Here, moves are written in the format of: initial of piece moved – file where it moved – rank where it moved. For example, Qg5 means "queen moves to the g-file and 5th rank" (that is, to the square g5). If there are two pieces of the same type that can move to the same square, one more letter or number is added to show the file or rank from which the piece moved, e.g. Ngf3 means "knight from the g-file moves to the square f3". The letter P showing a pawn is not used, so that e4 means "pawn moves to the square e4".

If the piece makes a capture, "x" is written before the square in which the capturing piece lands on.<sup>[25]</sup> Example: Bxf3 means "bishop captures on f3". When a pawn makes a capture, the file from which the pawn left is used in place of a piece initial. For example: exd5 means "pawn captures on d5".

If a pawn moves to its eighth rank, getting a promotion, the piece chosen is written after the move, for example e1Q or e1=Q. Castling is written by the special notations 0-0 for kingside castling and 0-0-0 for queenside. A move which places the opponent's king in check normally has the notation "+" added, won" and ½-½ is a draw.

In print, figurines (like those in diagrams, but smaller) are used for the pieces rather than initials. This has the advantage of being language-free, whereas the initials of pieces are different in every language. Typefaces which include figurines can be purchased by chess authors. Also, basic notes can be added by using a system of well-known punctuation marks and other symbols.<sup>[25]</sup> For example: ! means a good move, !! means a very good move, ? means a bad move, ?? a very bad move (sometimes called a blunder), !? a creative move that may be good, and ?! a doubtful move. The purpose of these methods is to make publications readable in a wider range of countries. For example, one kind of a simple "trap" known as the Scholar's mate, as in the diagram to the right, may be recorded:

1. e4 e5
2. Qh5?! Nc6
3. Bc4 Nf6?? (3...Qe7 would prevent the mate, with 4...Nf6 next move)
4. Qxf7# 1-0

With figurines in place of the initials, the chess notation is understood universally.

Playing arena

Players are not allowed to smoke in the playing area. They are only allowed to smoke in areas designated by the organiser. Mobile phones may not be used or even switched on. In many tournaments players may not bring mobile phones into the playing area. Players cannot use any source of advice during a game, such as other players or chess books, nor analyse the game on a device. These and other matters are covered by the FIDE Laws on the conduct of the players.<sup>[14]</sup>Article 12

A game is divided into three stages: the opening, the middlegame, and the endgame.

Opening

The first moves of a chess game are called the opening.<sup>[26][27]</sup> A chess opening is a name given to a series of opening moves. Recognized patterns of opening moves are openings and have been given names such as the Ruy Lopez or Sicilian defence. They are listed in reference works such as the Encyclopedia of Chess Openings. There are dozens of different openings. They range from gambits, where material, such as pawns are offered for fast development (e.g. the King's Gambit), to slower openings, which lead to a maneuvering type of game (e.g. the Réti opening). In some opening lines, the sequence thought best for both sides has been worked out to 20–30 moves; most players avoid such lines.<sup>[28]</sup> Expert players study openings throughout their chess career, as opening theory keeps on developing.

The basic aims of the opening phase are:<sup>[29]</sup>

Development: to place (develop) the pieces (mostly bishops and knights) on useful squares where they will have the most powerful impact on the game.<sup>[30]</sup>

Control of the center: the center is the most important part of the board. The player who controls the center can move their pieces around freely. The opponent, on the other hand, will find their pieces cramped, and difficult to move about.

King safety: keeping the king safe from danger. Castling (see section above) can often do this.

Pawn structure: pawns can be used to control the center. Players try to avoid making pawn weaknesses such as isolated, doubled or backward pawns, and pawn islands – and to force such weaknesses in the opponent's position.

White, by virtue of the first move, begins the game with a better chance of winning. Black normally tries to equalize or to get counterplay during the game.
